Easter Sunday

Memories are so important; they connect us to the story of our lives. When we recall the events, we have lived through, the joys, the sorrows, we remember people who are precious to us and we can relive those moments of love, and of heartache, and treasure them and keep them close. Over the last days we have revisited the events surrounding the Crucifixion and Resurrection of Our Blessed Lord, we have listened to many extracts from the scriptures which have formed the patchwork which is the story of our faith journey.

Each of the events described, the ideas formed in the minds of those who were present, are part of the memory of individuals whose stories they have touched. The Gospels, the Old Testament, the Letters, taken together are the basis of our belief. When Paul recalls the words Jesus used at the Last Supper he touches the memories of those who were present and makes that meal present in the minds of those gathered today round the altar of the Lord. When Isaiah speaks of the suffering servant, whose treatment at the hands of his enemies are so vividly described, yet who triumphed over His adversity, he reminds us that whatever we may face we have Christ as our support through even the most difficult of times.

We also have Easter, the spring that follows winter, the day of resurrection when the promise of Christ "I am with you, yes to the end of time" rings loudly and joyfully in our lives, and we know that our story, like His, can only end in joy if we follow Him. Today we have the memories of Peter as he baptises the household of the Roman, Cornelius, and his statement of faith in his friend and redeemer, Jesus Christ. Finally, in the Gospel, we meet the last character in our Lenten and Easter journey, Mary of Magdala. The faithful, trusting, lady who has the courage to go to the tomb where they have laid her beloved friend to give Him the final rites of His earthly life but instead finds an empty tomb, a risen Lord.

We need to place these events in our own memories: we have grown up with these stories, our lives have been changed by the insights we have gained. Our faith is built not just on the stories but on our reflections and the understanding that we have gained. Jesus died so that we may have life, full and overflowing, and that life, faithfully lived, will lead us, one day, to eternal life. David Frank
